COMPANY WILL ASK CONCESSION

Utah Light & Railway Corporation Wants Power Rate Changed.

CITY MAY GO AHEAD WITH CON-DEMNATION PROCEEDINGS.

The Utah Light & Railway company has as yet made no move to accept or reject the ordinance consolidating and uniformly extending its franchises so that they will all expire Jan. 1, 1950. It is said, however, that the officials of the Utah Light & Railway company have decided to accept the ordinance, provided they can induce the requisite number of the councilmen to agree so to amend it as to eliminate the pro-vision requiring the company to fur-nish electrical energy to the general nish electrical energy to the general public at the same price as to the city, 1½ cents per kilowatt hour, and to extend the life of its franchises so that they will expire Jan. f, 1955, giving it a full fifty years from Jan. 1, 1995.

These modifications in the ordinance

These modifications in the ordinance will, it is said, be asked within the next two weeks. The indications are that the first will be readily granted, but it is probable that the majority of the councilmen will be opposed to adding on the extra five years. The only thing that will induce them to consent to do so will be their desire to remove the final obstacle to the construction of the proposed extension of the municipal water and sewer systems.

It is probable that by the time the Utah Light & Railway company makes its next move in the franchise matter. will, it is said, be asked within the next its next move in the franchise matter Its next move in the franchise matter, Consulting Engineer A. F. Doremus will have approved the plans and specifications of the water and sewer systems, and the city council will have instructed the city engineer and the board of public works to begin the construction of those projects.

May Proceed to Condemn.

Should the Utah Light & Railway company manifest a disposition to pro-ong the agony by asking for changes in the ordinance that its officials know the council will not grant, there will be a resolution put through the council instructing the city's legal department to begin condemnation proceedings to acquire possession of as much of the land owned by the Utan Light & Railway company and associated interests along Big Cottenwood creek as may be required in the construction of the Big Cottonwood conduit, power stations, reservoirs, etc.

Work Will Not Wait.

As soon as this resolution is adopted As soon as this resolution is adopted and signed by Mayor Morris the city-engineer will begin setting stakes in the land belonging to the company along the creek, and the actual construction of the conduit will be commenced. If the company objects, the city-will give a bond to indemnify it for any less or damage it may sustain and will go given to be with the company objects. for any loss or damage it may sustain and will go right along with the work.

"We are going to wait the motions of the Utah Light & Railway company a short time, and a short time only," said a city official yesterday, "and if it does not announce whether it will accept or reject the consolidated franchise given it by the council, we will act on the assumption that it does not act on the assumption that it does not want to do business with the city and will begin condemnation proceedings. Then it will have a chance to prove in court that its water right on Big Cottonwood is worth $100,000, as claimed by General Manager R. S. Campbell. The company will be lucky quarter of that amoun

How to Cure Insomnia. (Philadelphia Inquirer.)

Lying awake is often a habit. It is worth almost any effort to break up such a habit. Insomnia is usually the result of one such a habit.

Insomnia is usually the result of one of three things—poor circulation, indigestion or mental distress. The person who studies himself carefully will be able to locate the difficulty and treat himself.

studies himself carefully will be able to locate the difficulty and treat himself accordingly.

For poor circulation try warm baths, warm water bottles. brisk rubbing, soaking the feet and deep breathing.

For indigestion take a warm drink before retiring or when sleepless. Drink warm water, warm milk, weak tea or coco and breathe deeply.

For mental distress mere will power is the best. Close the eyes and as fast as the thoughts come drive them out. Carry on in the mind a house cleaning process. Sweet sleep and plenty of it will go a great way toward keeping women young. When sleep departs wrinkles come.

It is by sleep that we gain strength for another day. Sleep is to the brain and nerves what food is to the body.

Here are a few simple, tried rules for driving away insompia:

cold feet.

If the events of the day have been trying, read a short, light story before retiring.

Leave the window down at the top and protect the bed from draughts.

As soon as the body touches the bed relax the muscles, shut the eyes and make ready to sleep. Nothing drives away sleep more quickly than the thought that one can't sleep.

Ten Strike Made the First Day by the New General Passenger Agent.

(Chicago Record-Herald.) The primer of "How to Become ; Railroad General Passenger Agent' contains the following recipe: "Begin at the very bottom and work up. There is no other way.' Such had been the infallible rule until

J. P. Elmer jumped into the saddle of the Great Western's passenger department, taking the daring leap at a single bound. The railroad world was amazed, but J. P. pursued the even tenor of his ways and within a twelmemonth he was able to take his seat around the long mahogany table in the meeting room of the Western Passenger association. Elmer's appointment came when as commodore he was sailing a boat on White Bear lake during a famous regatta. Mr. Stickney liked the way he beat out the other fellows after the race seemed hopelessly lost. After J. P. came in a victor and was contentedly sucking his redolent briar in front of his tent the president approached him and abruptly said: "J. P., the Great Western needs a general passenger agent. How would the job suit you?"
"What is a G. P. A. and what is he supposed to do as an excuse for drawing his salary?" asked J. P., undissupposed to do as an excuse for drawing his salary?" asked J. P., undisturbed.

"There isn't much excuse for drawing the salary," replied the president.
"Paying it has become a habit with railroads. Incidentally, there is a tradition that he is presumed to get business for his company. Do you fancy it?"

Elmer thought for a moment and re-plied: "It sounds good to me, all but the business part. I can do the rest

"You will learn the business quickly enough," declared the president. So it happened that J. P. walked into the general offices a few days later prepared to do or expire. Striding into the center of the room he gave his voice full play and demanded: "Where is the general passenger agent's desk?" "The general passenger agent is not in at present," replied the chief clerk, who had not heard of the change in things he does not need."

In telling the story recently at a dinner party Mr. Elmer declared that while he was compelled to put up an awful front he knew he would have to make a confidant of some ope. He selected Frank Malone as the most confiding looking member of his staff. Sending for him, he carefully locked the door of his private office and said: "Malone, on the q. t. what does a G. P. A. do?"

But how does he get it? Just go out and gather it in any old way?"
"That would be a good way, I think."
Elmer thought it over and determined to get some business at once. Hastening to the busiest portion of St. Paul, he walked up and down, looking for victims. Presently three of his close friends sauntered along and Elmer rushed up to them, and, grasping one of them by the lapel of the coat, ex-

"How cheap?" asked one of them. Elmer made a rapid mental calculation and replied: "Say $10 round trip, less than half fare."

"We'll go," they declared.

"Bully. How many of your friends, did you say, were going?"

"None."

"None."
"That's too bad. Don't you think they ought to go to Chicago? It's so jolly in Chicago. Round them up and take 'em all along. I need the business. You know that's what a G. P. A.'s for,

A NEW LINCOLN STORY.

Paymaster John Furey Tells How He Christened Photograph Gallery. (Washington Post.) At the last meeting of the Loyal Legion Paymaster John Furey of the navy told a story of a personal experience in Washington with President Lincoln that seems to have so far escaped the notice of his biographers.

"The treasury department," said Mr. Furey, "was experimenting with photography to see to what extent greenbacks might be reproduced through that means by counterfeiters. The experiments were conducted in a little tographer, the actual work being done by an operator named Alexander Gar-diner and an assistant, a red-headed scotchman named Knox.

"Mr. Lincoln became very much interested in the experiments, and he and Mrs. Lincoln often visited the little shed to watch the operators, with whom he soon became familiar enough to call them 'Aleck' and 'Sandy' when he addressed them.

"After the experiments had shown that the colors of the greenbacks could not be reproduced by photography the Scotchman named Knox.

The kindness and generosity of Colonel Robert G. Ingersoil won for him many friends who could not but deeply regret his opinions. Among them was Henry Ward Beecher.

In the study of the famous preacher was an elaborate celestial globe, which had been sent him with the compliments of some manufacturer. On its surface, in delicate workmanship, were raised figures of the constellations and of the stars which compose them.

The globe struck ingersoil's fancy. He turned it round and round, examining it with admiration.

"This is just what I want," he said; "who made it."

"Who made it, do you say, colone!" repeated Beecher, "Whe way, colone!" "Who made it, do you say, colonel repeated Beecher. "Who made this globe Why nobody, of course; it just happened."

Hopeless Case.

"Aren't you aware," said the kind lady, "that there is something dignified about honest labor?"
"Yes, ma'am," answered the unlaundered hobo. "I've heard uv fellers wot stood on their dignity, but I'm satersfide t' set on mine."
